

EDITORIAL NOTE

Consistent policy of this journal is aiming at reaching out, discovering and presenting valuable research in ESP and the related fields across the globe. The current issue is the result of one such endeavor. It contains the highest quality papers delivered at the International Conference “Synergy of Languages and Cultures: Interdisciplinary Studies”, Faculty of Modern Languages, Saint Petersburg State University, 30-31 May, 2019. This collection illustrates current trends in ESP/LSP research and practice, and the adjacent scientific domains such as intercultural communication, translation studies, to name but a few, mostly in Russia. We believe it is therefore valuable to our readership as a means of getting a fresh insight into the advancements made in this area of language instruction in that part of the world.

We hope you will find this encounter useful for your own conceiving of ESP/LSP.

Prof. Svetlana Rubtsova, Dean of the Faculty of Modern Languages, Saint Petersburg State University, Russia
Guest Editor

Dr. Nadežda Stojković
Editor-in-Chief